DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 7 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Chen.

With regard to claim 7, Chen teaches a system protection center for a transmission network comprising a data concentrator for storing phasor data from measurement units in a power transmission network and for storing substation data from a plurality of substations (col. 13, lines 51-56) and a system protection unit for generating a stability margin value of the network (fig. 5, part 22-3 & col. 12, lines 53-68).

With regard to claim 9, Chen teaches the system protection center comprising means for transmitting network state information to an energy management system of the transmission network (col. 13, lines 51-53).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claim 8 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chen in view of Teyssandier et al.

Chen does not teach the system protection center comprising an automated control unit for generating commands for a substation automation unit. Teyssandier et al teaches a remote transmission device that generates commands for an automation unit by an automated control unit (abstract & fig. 1). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time of the invention, to modify Chen so that commands are generated by an automated control unit from a margin value, as taught by Teyssandier et al, so as to control the transmission device from a remote location without human intervention.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claims 1-6 are allowed.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The prior art of record does not teach a method for assessing the stability of a power transmission network that transmits information regarding the states of switches of at least one substation to a system protection center.

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments, with respect to claims 7-9, filed July 28, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. On page 3, the applicant argues that Chen does not teach calculating a stability margin value. The applicant's attention is directed to column 4, lines 46-50. Chen teaches calculating a stability margin value by deriving a fault resistance parameter from phasor data. Claims in a pending application should be given their broadest reasonable interpretation (In re Pearson, 181 USPQ 641 (CCPA 1974)). In this case, "stability margin value" is broadly interpreted as being values or specifications that improve the reliability of the system, which the abstract (lines 14-16) and column 1 (lines 10-14) discloses.

Conclusion

7. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
